[From the Invergort Greete, 2011.]
In the Invity Stacette of Friday, Nov. II, we gave some particulars of the visit of a strange dog to the farm of Mr. John Carbart, in Hickory Greet Township, which stacked Mrs. C. wite beat him off with a pitchfort, aided by her husband. The dog their ran towards the house, where a little girl was playing. Warned by her parents, the child ran into the house, but the parents, the child ran into the house, but the consistence of the state of the st that State, was resisted by the Democract, and we believe faulty defeated. The member who made the most attrenuous resistance said "he "should vote against the bill; it was intended "to incorporate a set of infidel Dutch, who did "not believe in heaven, hell or the devil." The actual cause of resistance to the incorporation of this gymnastic and social institution was to be found in the fact that the Turners are almost unanimously Republicans, and Requiblicans have no rights in the size States that the Democracy are "bound to respect." Especially an "infidel Dutch" Republican is a man to be marked out for peculiar maignity and prescription.— Access Gats Obs.

immense and growing commerce, offer to capitalists and industrious business men the assurance that the conditions exist here which will issure great and permanent prosperity, and individual succes.

Our lake, canal and resirred communications will for all time control the trade of a vast extent of country. Already, and in the winter ceasor, contracts are being made here by the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada to deliver on products in Liverpool for eighty-aven and a half cents per hundred pounds. A fact full of promise for the fature.

There has been an time in the history of Chicago when money and skill Judicionally used, either in banking, manufactures, commerce, or agriculture, has promised such sure and large returns. The remark is especially true of manufactures. The aggregaty product of that branch of our business amounts to many millions of deliars per annun; but it is only since 1857 that the opening of the La Salle and other coal mines has farmished us with an adequate supply of superfor coal, at a lower price than is paid at Cincinnati or St. Louis for as good an article, and while some important and profitable kinds of manufactures, as of costion and woolen fabrics, are scarcely produced at all, or on say large soale, the demand for all is so great that it must be applied by large importations from abrond, of articles which could be as well and more cheapity made here. There are thousands of women and youths heretofore supported by the carnings of fathers and brothers, who would cheerfully take employment at low wares in cotton or woolen mills. Puel, land, rents and material are cheap, while the manufactured product finds a good price, ready sale, and a market which promises to be lithnitable. In a few years the cost of land and buildings—which is the chief outlay—will be perhaped double what it is now. The present is therefore the favorable time for action, and for preasing the ambiest upon the attention of capitalists.

Impressed with these views, and hoping that good may result from the movement, the Horrwann & Genreer.—We shall be doing a favor to our readers in calling attention to the advertisement of Hoffmann & Gelpeke, Bankers, in another column. It will be observed that their arrangements embrace every department of the banking business. The honorable position which 4th house has sequired among the banking justitutions of our city and the West is a high compliment to the ability and the promptages with which its business is transacted, as

WAR.

We publish clackmers Mr. Douglas speech in the Senate on Monday last, relative to the invasion of Virginia which id not take place.
The text selected by the speaker is the corres-

at President Buchahan concerning aythical bands of deeperadors supposed to be narching from Pennsylvania and Ohio against Virginia. It will be remembered that Gov. Ohio devils were coming in large numbers, that he should most them with the whale military power of Virginia, that he should not only drive them out but he should pursue them the State. It proposes to give to the Opper tith the content of the Senate, the power point search officers; and to give to the G more alone power to appoint field officers against the content of the c not find say entherity in the Constitu-ier which be could participate in the age, especially in the absence of any o sot in accordance with the urner added it wise. instances nearly as bad as this, though none came quite up to it in brasiness.

Af er the Fresident had concluded, Mr. Olcoti said that the Society had beld eight exhibitions in seven States, and had received $200,000 as proceeded, out of all which they had but $5,000 left. This tells badly in comparison with the manner in which the fairs of the Royal Agricultural Society of England are conducted. Their means set hot spent and wasted on mere show and esteration. Shall we not follow the practice of the Royal Agricultural Society, the largest and most important in the world, where he saw at one fair one hundred and fifty-six portable engines and eighty eighthre-shingmachines, requiring ten days of previous examination, but where there were no bills for scarfs and ribands and liquor, but only such expenditures as were proper and indispensable? The receip's of the past year from one fair and all sources was $40,000, and we have saved only $5,000, and all without our doing one-tenth of the benefit to our country that is done by the English society to theirs. There were no scarfs or ribands at the English fair. Earls, dutes, and marquises, members of the assisty, were there astriged to move about and investigate everything they wished to see with merely a small leather badge in the button-hole. Private pentl men there paid their own expenses, and there were no bills to the extent of $1,400 for liquors alone. Pranything like proper comony had been observed by this accusty since it commencement, it would have been in a condition to have pursued its proper objects with power and success. We should have had a building, and publications such as would have been worthy of us.

Mr. Conger's motion was then carried.

Mr. Wilder thus rose to offer the report of the continues and investigate worthy of us.

meaning of the President to declare that the existing laws conferred no authorized Congress to cance to laws which would authorize the Federal Interposition to protect the states from invasion. My object is to raise the inquiry and ask the judgment of the Senate and the House upon the question whether it is not within the power of Congress, and, the duty of Congress, under the Constitution, to exist all laws which are necessary and proper for the protection of each and every State against invasion, either from foreith Fowers or from any portion of the United States.

Now, sir, I hope to be able to demonstrate that there is a wrong in this Union for which the Constitution of the United States has not provided a remedy. Mr. Fessender, of Maine, said he was somewhat at a loss to imagine the necessity for the resolution individuced by the Senator from Illinois. A committee had been appointed to investigate the Harper's Ferry outbreak, and he was willing to await their report. The Senator, however, apparently distrusting their capacity, had undertaken to instruct them in their duty, and availed himself of the opportunity to make a political apsects for political effect. His argument as to the power of Congress was nething new. No Senator was more anxious than himself to protect States from juvaion. On that point he agreed with the report of the committee. He desired that the Republican party was responsible for the Harper's Ferry invasion. Shere was nothing new in that tharge. It had got to be the dogma of the Democratic party, and part of their scheme for the next campaign. It was intended to affect the last section. Prior to 1854 the slavery agitation had been quieted. Both parties had declared for peace, when the excitement was renewed by the introduction of the Kansas-Nebrasks bill, and kept up by the subsequent attempt to force sharery upon a free Territory by

How the Life of a Senator was Saved

Those who were familiar with the political history of our country twenty years ago, remember walk, Dr. Linas of Missouri. Distinguished for talents and professional ability, but yet more for the excellence of his hear, he received by a distinction ar rare as it was honorable, the unanimous vote of the Legislature for the office of Senator of the United States. States.

In discharge of his Congressional duties, he was residing with his family in Washington, during the spring and summer of 1846, the last year of Mr. Van Buren's administration. One day during the menth of May of that year, Dr. and Mrs. Linn received an invitation to a large and formal diaber party, given by a public functionary, and to which the most prominent members, of the Administration party, richalling the President himself, and our present Chief Massaran, Mr. Bhachanan, were invited guests. Dr. Linn was very anxious to p person, and a was a the day came, finding himself suffering from an attack of indirection. simself suffering from an attack of indirection, as begged his wife to bear his apology in person, and make one of the dinner party, leaving limest frome. To this she somewhat rejuctanty consented. She was accompanied to the oor of their host by a friend, General Jones, who promised to return and remain with Dr Lina during the evening. At table, Mrs. Lina sat next to General Ma comb, who had conducted her to dinner: at mmediately opposite to her sat Silas Wrigh constor from New York, the most intima iend of her husband, and a man by whose eath, shortly after, the country sustained a reparable loss. Even during the early part of the dinner Even during the early part of the dinner, Mrs. Linn felt very uneasy about her husband. She tried to reason herself our of this, as she knew that his indisposit on was not at all serious; but in vain. She mentioned her uneasiness to General Maconb; but he rounined her of what she herself had previously told himthat General Joses had provinted to remain with Dr. Linn, and that, in the very unlikely contingency of any sudden illness, he would be sure to apprise her of R. Notwithstanding these reasons outside as dinner drew towards a ler sudden pallor was noticed by Sena

Wright, and excited ms narm. "I am sure you re ill, Mrs. Lim," he said; "what is the matter?" She replied that she was q the wall but that he was q the wall but that he was the wall but that he was return to her husband Mr. Wright sought, as Coursal McComb has done, to calm her fears; but she replied a him, "If you wish to do mea favor, for whice I shall be grateful while Live, make some excise to our host, so that we can leave the table." Seeing her so greatly excited, he cour plied with her request, though they were the but serving the desert; and he and Mr. Wright accompanied Mrs. Lim home.

As they were taking leave of her at the door of her ledgings. Sonator Wright said, "shall call to-morrow morating, and have a goe laugh with the Dootor and yourself over you rante apprehensions." met the landlandy. "How is Dr. Linn?" anxiously asked. "Very well, I believe." the reply: "he took a bath more than this time. Gen. Jones said he was doing extremely well."

"The General is with him, is he Lot?"

"In a measure re-assued. Mrs. Linn hastened to her husband's bed-chamber, the door of which was closed. As she opened it, a dense smoke burst upon her, in such stiffing quantity, that she staggered and fell on the threshold. Recovering herself after a few seconds, she rushed into the foom. The bolster was on five, and the feathers burned with a bright glow, and a suffocating odor. She shrew herself upon the tod; but the fire, half amothered lift that moment, was faunci by the draught from the opened door, and kindling into sudden flame, caught ber light dress, which was in a blaze ou the instant. At the same moment, her eye fell on the large bath-tab, that in a blaze on the instant. At the arms me ment, her eye fell on the large bath-tub, tha had been used by her husband. She appear into it, extinguished her burging dress; the returning to the bed, she caught up the pillow and a sheet that was on fire, scorching her arm

"How fortunate it was," said Dr. Sewell to Mrs. Liffi, "that you arrived at the very mo-nast you did! Eve minutes more—nay three minutes, and in all human probability you would have nover seen your husband aliv-again."

Mr. Wright called, as he promised, the next toorning. "Well, Mrs. Linn," said he, smiling, "you have found out, by this time, how foolish that strange presentiment of yours was." "Come up stairs," she replied. And she ied him to his friend, scarcely yet able to speak; and then she showed him the remains led him to his friend, scarcely yet able to speak; and then she showed him the remains of the half-consumed holster, and partially burned bed lines. Whether the sight changed his opinion on the subject of presentiments, I cannot tell; but he turned pale as a corpse. Mrs. Linn said) and did not utter a word.

I had all the above particulars from Mrs. Linn herself, together with the permassion to jublish them in illustration of the subject I am treating, attested by date and names.

There is one point in councetion with the above narrative, which is worthy of special examination. In case we admit that Mrs. Jiane irresistible impulse to leave the dinner table was a spiritual impression, the question ermains, was it a warning of evil then existing or was it a presentiment of evil that was still to arise? In other words, was it in its character only clairvoyant, or was it in its na-ing, or was it a presentiment of evil that was still to arise? In other words, was it in its character only clairvoyant, or was it in its nature clearly prophetic?.

The impression was distinctly produced on Mrs. Linn's mind, as that lady told me, at least half an hour lesfore it became so urgent as to compel her to leave the entertainment. When she did leave, as the carriages were not ordered till eleven o'clock, and no hackney-casch was at hand, she and Mrs. Wright, as she firigher stated to see, roturned to the control of the control of
